Expectations...

Despite the strong increase in the foreign trade deficit, the current account balance continued to record surplus for the fourth consecutive month in October. The rise in services revenues supported this outlook. On the other hand, the upward trend in 12-month cumulative current account deficit persisted. According to the preliminary foreign trade data, foreign trade deficit continued to widen in November. As tourism revenues lose pace following the end of the summer season, we expect the current account balance to record deficits in the last two months of the year.
